Case Study

Marketing services company increases profits through Affinity Express ad production services

One of the leading media and marketing services companies in the U.S. needed a partner for marketing services ad production. The company uses direct marketing to target consumers based on market dynamics and changing consumer media habits, reaching 100 million shoppers each week and nine out of ten U.S. households. Plus, the company supports 15,000 advertisers, offering a wide range of media and marketing services to clients.

Challenges

In response to the economic downturn, the company decided to focus on reducing costs, increasing production efficiencies and pursuing the greatest growth and profit opportunities for the future. The company was committed to provide clients with innovative, value-oriented media.

Graphics production and account management functions within the company were decentralized across nine different locations, making for high overhead and process inefficiency. The company looked at available options for centralizing and decided to become one of the first companies in the direct marketing industry to implement outsourcing at this scale.

There were several objectives behind the outsourcing initiative:

- Lower costs
- Reduce turn times
- Better handle seasonal fluctuations in volumes
- Centralize and streamline processes

The Affinity Express Solution

After a thorough review of capabilities and operations, the company decided to contract with Affinity Express for ad production. The company selected Affinity Express because of its extensive expertise in offshore graphics production with high-volumes and tight turn times and proven results for respected category leaders in consumer products, retail and newspaper publishing.

Affinity Express handles ad design, including new builds, pickups with revisions, pre-flighting client-supplied files and page assembly for a specific client product, which is distributed to over 66 million households nationwide. Affinity Express has integrated its workflow with the client’s systems. Completed designs are returned in one day and Affinity Express handles approximately 1,000 files per week.

In addition to offshore production, Affinity Express maintained staff at the client’s location for several months to respond to quick-turn requests and traffic files to its operation in India. As a comfort level was developed and joint efforts at process improvements continued, Affinity Express was able to eliminate this onshore presence and provide additional savings to the client.

Client Benefits

to Affinity Express have influenced operations at the client's other graphics locations.

The company states that Affinity Express is meeting the desired cost savings and turn time goals. In addition, working in partnership with Affinity Express has resulted in the removal of cycle-time from the wrap graphic production process, allowing the sales organization more time to sell advertisers. Most importantly, the measure of success with outsourced ad production is when clients are not aware that ads are being produced offshore. The company believes the Affinity Express output is high-quality and seamless.

Affinity Express continues to fine-tune processes and work with the client to improve and develop workflows as both their needs and business changes. Employees from the Affinity Express India operation occasionally spend time at the client's office to review current business practices and learn about any updates required based on the changing direct mail environment. There are also annual meetings to discuss strategic opportunities for growth and new products. Affinity Express is currently exploring the feasibility of electronically tagging the client's offline print for easier conversion to online vehicles.

Value delivered

Affinity Express has delivered consistent cost savings, increased efficiency, compressed production and review cycles and reduced time to market. Beyond these measurable results, the partnership between Affinity Express and the client has continually evolved and strengthened; providing an excellent example of how the best outsourcing relationships work.
